Conclusion

In many cases, with the proper care and treatment, a person can recover and resume normal activities.

Trust is key in helping people to heal. A therapeutic alliance/relationship must be established.
